Tallow Room

Tallow Room is a two-room studio in an old candle works in Salford, run by engineer Rosa Mendel. Ada Vellum made her first album here, and The Low Meadows mixed Salt on the Ferry here.

BIOGRAPHY

The live room was the works' dipping floor, and it still smells faintly of beeswax when the heating comes on. It takes a five-piece band comfortably and a choir at a squeeze. The control room is built around a restored Soundcraft desk, outboard from the eighties and a pair of ATC monitors.

Rosa Mendel engineers most sessions herself and teaches mixing on weekday afternoons, one to one, on your own projects.
